Four Others Escape Without Serious Injury; Cars Crash In Clearfork Bridge

Jennie Marie Anderson, 16, who would have been a senior in Saltcreek township high school next fall, died in Cherrington hospital, Logan, at 11 p. m. Sunday of injuries suffered early that morning in an automobile collision. The accident happened in a narrow bridge over Clearfork creek on route 664, two miles southwest of Logan.

Miss Anderson, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. William Anderson, died without regaining consciousness. She was injured about the head and chest and a throat cut measured about seven inches. Her tongue was almost severed.

She was riding in the automobile driven by Guy Milton Thomas, 18, of Rockbridge route 3, when it collided head-on at 12:20 a. m. Sunday with the car of Samuel Smith, 66, of Logan route 2. Neither car turned over, and neither struck the narrow bridge, but both were demolished. Smith, riding alone, was not seriously hurt, and neither was Thomas, John Daniels, 20, of Middleport, or Helen Weaver, 17, of Laurelville, who were also in the Thomas car. The Anderson girl's parents live on Route 56 near the Saltcreek township school.

Survivors in addition to the parents include a sister, Edna of Columbus; two brothers, Lawrence and Gilbert of the home, and her grandmother, Mrs. Rozella Weaver of Lancaster.

The funeral will be Wednesday at 3 p. m. in the Tarlton Methodist church, the Rev. Samuel N. Root officiating. Burial will be in Tarlton cemetery by the Deffenbaugh funeral home. The body will be removed to the Anderson home Tuesday afternoon. Pall bearers at the funeral will be Loren Fogler, Nelson Jones, Billy Mitchell, George Rihl, Lloyd Dille and Del Doner, all classmates.

Ohio Toll Down; Three Soldiers Injured In Crash

MILITARY COMMISSION TO TRY EIGHT NAZI AGENTS

These seven men will make up the military court which will try the eight German agents, recently apprehended by the Federal Bureau of Investigation and charged with entering the United States to commit sabotage. Maj. Gen. Frank McCoy, top center, is chairman of the commission. Others are Brig. Gen. John T. Lewis, upper left; Maj. Gen. Walter S. Grant, upper right; Brig. Gen. John T. Kennedy, lower left; Maj. Gen. Lorenzo D. Gasser, next; Maj. Gen. Guy V. Henry, next; Maj. Gen. Blanton Winslip, lower right. The trial, which will be held privately in Washington, will begin sometime after Wednesday, July 8.

who served overseas in the first World War made last-minute plans to participate in what promises to be the most dramatic "court martial" in U. S. history. Two of them, Col. Cassius M. Dowell and Col. Kenneth C. Royall, must act as defense counsel for the accused. The third, Maj. Gen. Myron C. Cramer, judge advocate of the Army, will serve as prosecutor, along with Attorney General Francis Biddle.

Trial Of Eight Germans To Take Less Than Week

WASHINGTON, July 6—Military authorities predicted today that the trial of the eight German saboteurs starting in Washington Wednesday will last less than a week.

Captured by the FBI after they were landed on American shores from German submarines, the Nazis will be brought before a seven-man military commission, with the threat of the gallows or a firing squad facing them.

All of them, according to the FBI, have confessed that they had planned to blow up American aluminum plants and key railroad and power works in an effort to halt American plane production.

Since the saboteurs have admitted their guilt in the confessions, the military court is expected to complete the testimony of the case in three or four days, with its decision to be announced almost immediately.

HOLIDAY STUNT, AIRMEN REPORT OF PLANE RAID

LONDON, July 6—The Fourth of July bombing by American flyers of Nazi airdromes in Holland was staged in impromptu fashion to celebrate Independence Day, it was learned today.

The Americans, newly arrived in England, were visiting an RAF airdrome, where they did a few hours of practice flying.

Hospitably, the British airmen at the field asked if they would like to take part in a raid to celebrate the Fourth.

There was no need to repeat the invitation. The United States Army flyers immediately took over half of the 12 fueled and waiting twin-engined Douglas Boston bombers marked with Britain's cockade, and the force was off.

The raid was of a spectacular nature which is not likely to form a regular part of allied air operations over western Europe. The Boston bombers operated over a greater distance than usual and consequently were unable to take along heavy fighter support.

In order to reach Valkenburg the planes were obliged to wing their way 150 miles over Nazi-occupied territory in broad daylight. Ordinarily fighters escort bombers on daytime bombing missions,

Enemy Forced From Strong Point In Desert, Cairo

LONDON, July 6—Adolf Hitler's long awaited Spring offensive in southern Russia appeared to have been launched in full force today with an estimated 1,000,000 troops and 2,000 tanks battering Soviet lines at Belgorod in an effort to break through into the oil-rich Caucasus.

The Soviet high command admitted that the Nazis had driven a wedge into Russian positions in the area.

The Nazi-controlled Vichy news agency claimed that the Germans had cut the vital Moscow-Rostov railway and added that the rail junction of Voronezh, 130 miles east of Kursk, "probably has fallen."

By International News Service
As axis sources claimed to have broken through Soviet forces to reach the Don river, today, news of another Nazi reverse came from Egypt.

In a fresh series of counter-attacks British troops inflicted heavy losses on the axis armies at El-Alamein and recaptured an important position in the desert from the enemy.

Reports from the Russian front, however, painted a dark picture. While Soviet quarters failed to confirm axis claims of closing the jaws of the Kursk-Belgorod pincers on the vital rail junction of Voronezh on the Moscow-Rostov railroad, the Russian high command (Continued on Page Two)

F. D. R. PLEDGES AID TO CHINESE IN WAR ON JAPS

WASHINGTON, July 6—On the fifth anniversary of Japan's "most despicable attack" on China, President Roosevelt today cabled Generalissimo Chiang Kai-Shek a most solemn pledge that men of the United States and China will fight on as "brothers in arms" until the power of Tokyo in the Pacific is completely crushed.

"You, the people of China, and we, the people of the United States and the United Nations," America's war leader assured the valiant military chief of Chungking, "will fight on together to victory, to the establishment of peace and justice and freedom throughout the world."

In the presidential cablegram also was an implied answer to China's urgent appeal for immediate assistance in the way of American fighting and bombing planes and heavy artillery.

"Increasingly," Mr. Roosevelt told Gen. Chiang Kai-Shek, "your arms and our arms will thrust back the enemy."

PHILADELPHIA, July 6—Twenty-year-old Joe Higgins today began a long convalescent period during which he won't be able to speak a word.

Joe will forget all about the pain and the long wait if the Navy accepts him some eight weeks from now.

Higgins, a Navy yard clerk, was rejected because his jaw protruded too much. So he had surgeons remove pieces of the lower jaw and wire the parts together.

Enemy Installations In Pacific District Struck By Series Of Heavy Assaults

By LEE VAN ATTA
UNITED NATIONS HEAD-QUARTERS IN AUSTRALIA, July 6—Large destructive fires were set among enemy installations by United Nations bombers in a continuation of their series of heavy bombing attacks against the Jap-held bases at Lae and Salamaua, New Guinea, it was announced today at Gen. Douglas MacArthur's headquarters.

The latest assaults on Japanese bases covered a wide area extending from the island of Timor eastward to the Solomons.

The Japanese countered with two attacks against the United Nations advanced base at Port Moresby, causing light damage and some casualties.

The communique announcing the heavy raids on Lae and Salamaua said:

"Our air force continued its series of heavy attacks on enemy installations. Large fires were observed at various points in the target area."

"One enemy fighter was shot down and four others damaged."

In the light assault against Timor, the part-Dutch, part-Portuguese island off northwestern Australia, the allied fliers struck

The British foreign office recently disclosed that Lord Halifax was returning from his post in Washington, but it was not revealed whether he was coming for a visit or whether he would remain in England.

This dispatch was sent from an enemy country, whose motive in releasing news is likely to be propaganda. Axis claims should be credited only when confirmed by American or Allied sources.

DRAFT DODGER TRAPPED AFTER WAVE OF CRIME

TUNKHANNOCK, Pa., July 6—A 23-year-old alleged draft dodger who eluded police for six weeks, kidnapped a 14-year-old girl, shot her three times and finally was nabbed in a chicken coop, was under guard in Wyoming county jail today.

He was identified by state motor police as Charles Sebaucak, of nearby Nicholson, after an armed posse of 60 rifle farmers cornered him and forced surrender yesterday.

Corp. Leroy Thomas, of the Tunkhannock sub-station, said Sebaucak fled trial on draft evasion charges May 22 and apparently lived in the woods since. On June 30, the state trooper added, the fugitive lured Louise Oakley from her home near Nicholson and forced her at pistol point to remain with him.

When the girl's grandfather, Norman Oakley, 62, and a neighbor found Sebaucak, the youth hid behind the girl and shot her three times in the thigh, Thomas said. Sebaucak escaped following the shooting but was captured several hours later in a chicken coop.

TOLL IS BOOSTED TO 14

Evacuation Of Populace In North Hints Much Action Expected Soon

WASHINGTON, July 6—Indicating a determination to sweep the Japanese from their foothold in the Aleutian islands, the United States Navy announced today that U. S. submarines on July 4 torpedoed four Japanese destroyers in the north Pacific sinking three and leaving one "burning fiercely."

It was the first time that American undersea craft had been reported in action in the Kiska island area since the Japanese occupied it several weeks ago.

The latest toll brings to at least 14 the number of Japanese warships and auxiliary craft sunk and damaged by United States forces since the bombing of Dutch Harbor naval base June 3.

Disclosure that more than 600 civilians have been evacuated from islands in the Aleutian archipelago indicated today that events may be shaping toward a series of major clashes between American and Japanese forces for possession of the North Pacific outposts.

While Japanese occupation of Attu, Kiska and adjoining islands is not considered by military men a serious threat to the mainland, these sources admit that the enemy may attempt to use them as springboards for efforts to take other islands further east.

All Go To Mainland
The fact that virtually all civilians have been transferred from the thinly populated Aleutians to the mainland may mean that U. S. military and naval leaders possibly are preparing for any eventuality in that area.

Revelation of the evacuation was made by the Bureau of Indian Affairs which said that all civilians on the Aleutians from below Dutch Harbor, on Unalaska island, to Attu, westernmost island of the long chain, were removed by naval vessels in the last week to "near Juneau, Alaska."

Civilians were also taken from the Pribilof islands, in the Bering sea, north and west of the Aleutians.

Most of those removed are natives, since population of the islands included very few white (Continued on Page Two)

DESCRIPTION OF HITLER AS KIND MAN IS COSTLY

LOS ANGELES, July 6—A description of Hitler as a "kind gentleman" who wanted to do "only what was good" today threatened the American citizenship of Friedrich W. Bergmann, German-born Long Beach geologist.

In the first action of its kind here since the declaration of war, the government brought suit for the cancellation of Bergmann's citizenship to the ground that he obtained it through false and fraudulent representations. The scientist became a naturalized citizen in 1937.

COATLESS CONGREGATION INVITED BY MINISTER

KEARNY, N. J., July 6—Declaring "Christianity is not incompatible with comfort," the Rev. Richard D. Jones of Grace Methodist church today urged other churches to follow his lead in allowing parishioners to attend services in their shirtsleeves.

"If people can come here and relax they will get more out of the sermon and the prayers," he said.

people, a spokesman for the bureau said.

None of the Attu civilians, who are all natives except one trader and one or two school teachers, was removed. Neither were any of the civilians evacuated from Dutch Harbor, but some natives were removed from a nearby village. Some of the civilian population of Kiska were understood to have been removed also.

With the civilians out of the possible battle zone, military experts pointed out there would be no need to worry about them in the event that the Japanese attempted to move eastward and major engagements took place.

Should the Japanese attempt to invade other islands, this absence of civilians would leave the way clear for possible extension of the American bombing raids that already have taken a heavy toll of the enemy.

Only Saturday the Navy revealed that despite adverse weather conditions Army bombers had staged four new raids on Japanese installations and shipping in the Attu-Kiska area during the last two weeks.

Ever since the bombing of the Dutch Harbor naval base the Nipponese have been moving men and materials into the Kiska area under cover of fog.

That the Nipponese apparently intend to make use of their foothold on the Aleutians was intimated by the navy announcement that on July 2 a patrol plane observed three enemy transports with escorting vessels off Agattu island, near Attu.

LONG HUNT FOR CRASH VICTIMS ENDED IN WEST

EISHOP, Cal., July 6—A seven month search for the bodies of six Army officers and two enlisted men killed in an Army transport plane crash in the high Sierras on December 12 neared an end today.

Army searchers recovered the bodies of Major General Herbert Dargue of Mitchell Field, L. I., commanding general of the First Air Force, and Capt. James Leavitt of March Field, Cal., from the ice and snow of the Sierras, leaving only the body of Staff Sgt. Stephen Hoffman of Charleston, Pa., still to be recovered.

After being balked repeatedly by alternate thaws and freezes in the high altitude, Army men finally succeeded in uncovering the bodies of the two officers about 100 yards from the wrecked plane.

The plane had been found May 7 by G. B. Burns, Spokane, Wash., real estate man, whose son, First Lt. Homer C. Burns, co-pilot, was one of the victims of the crash.

Burns vowed that he would never rest until his son's body was found, and although he lacked mountain climbing experience, he braved high Sierra storms and succeeded after weeks of search in locating the plane.

SOLONS APPROVE MONTH'S MONEY FOR 'AG' FORCE

WASHINGTON, July 6—The Senate appropriations committee today unanimously voted to report a resolution providing funds for the department of agriculture for one month in an effort to break the congressional deadlock over the $680,000,000 annual agriculture supply bill.

The action was taken after Democratic congressional leaders discussed the danger of a breakdown in the department with President Roosevelt, and Mr. Roosevelt reiterated his opposition to a house "rider" banning sale of government controlled surplus grains for feed at less than parity prices.

CHICAGO AREA SCoured FOR SABOTAGE SUSPECTS

CHICAGO, July 6—Federal agents joined Chicago police and special officers today in a search for four men who were driven off by gunfire in a suspected attempt to sabotage the south side plant of the Link Belt company, engaged in vital war production.

One of the quartet was believed to have been wounded by William Damrill, private detective employed by the plant who discovered the intruders and opened fire as they escaped in a waiting automobile.

Damrill discovered the men Saturday as they were entering the plant grounds through a hole burrowed under a high wire fence surrounding the property.

One of the men, carrying a large brown package in his arms, had crawled inside the fence.

waves. In the first, 20 bombers and six zero naval fighter planes took part in an assault on the air-drome. Later, seven more bombers came over in the second wave. Light damage and some casualties resulted.

The day before the Nipponese made two attacks against Port Moresby. One was a night foray in which only two planes made a unsuccessful night raid on the air-drome. During the day 20 zeros were intercepted when they tried to carry out a morning attack. Allied fighter planes which rose to meet the raiders shot down one Jap craft and damaged three others. Three of the United Nations planes were lost.

At the same time allied airmen made two heavy attacks on Lae and Salamaua, one at night and the other during the day. Runways, aircraft disposal pens and buildings were blasted by direct hits in the target areas. Five Jap interceptor planes were shot down and three others hit and probably destroyed. Only one United Nations plane was lost when it was smashed in collision with a Jap plane.

The most difficult job, according to military view, will confront Cols. Dowell and Royall. There is considerable speculation over whether the eight accused men will plead guilty and throw themselves at the mercy of the court, since they already have confessed.

Full details on arrangements for the trial were expected to be announced within the next 24 hours. It will be held, according to present plans, amid the utmost secrecy. The eight saboteurs made many "contacts" in this country, and because many phases of the investigation are still to be completed the commission will hold the trial behind locked doors. scrap rubber already had started from collection depots and oil company bulk plants to the reclaiming factories and government warehouses.

Chairman of the council, William R. Boyd Jr., appealed to the public to redouble its effort in collecting rubber to "build the nation's stockpile high enough to assure us victory."

Boyd also urged a half-day holiday for everyone except war workers to speed the drive.

Meanwhile, the iron and steel industry has raised $1,500,000 and glycerine producers another $500,000 to finance a national advertising campaign, beginning next Monday, to stimulate the collection not only of tin and household fats but also iron and steel scrap, rubber and other waste materials.

The tin-can campaign, stemming from the fact that the Japanese have overrun the British Malay states and the Netherlands East Indies where the U. S. obtain 108,555 tons of the "124,810 tons of tin imported in 1940, starts in 36 cities representing 47 percent of the urban population. In September, the residents of 104 smaller urban areas will be asked to begin collecting tin cans.

Officials asked housewives to clean tin cans thoroughly, remove tops and bottoms and paper labels and flatten the can to make collection easier.

THREE KILLED AS LAKE FREIGHTER, CRUISER HIT

DETROIT, July 6—Three persons were believed to have lost their lives today and 12 others were injured when a Great Lakes freighter crashed into a 42-foot cabin cruiser in the nearby St. Clair river.

Known dead was Mrs. Irene Wiseman, 40, of suburban Highland Park. Missing and believed drowned were Barbara Bagley, 13, and her sister, Jacqueline, 14, of St. Clair Shores. The other 12 persons aboard the craft were injured.

The power boat belonged to Thomas Dwyer, of Roseville, and it collided with the freighter James Watt. The crash occurred near Clay's landing in the main channel of the river, north of Detroit. Dwyer suffered a possible fracture of the spine.

The impact of the collision split the cruiser in half. The two sisters were asleep in the cabin. Mrs. Wiseman drowned, police said.

Robert Watts, 22, of Worthington, drowned in Big Walnut creek north of Columbus when swimming with friends.

Mrs. E. Bernice Dutton, 40, widow of former Fairfield County Prosecutor Stanley Dutton, died in Lancaster of gunshot wounds accidentally inflicted when a 12-year-old neighbor girl picked up a pistol to examine it.

Peter S. Meyers, 25, a reporter for the Springfield News, was killed when his auto overturned four miles east of Springfield on State Road 70.

Two Dead at Chillicothe

George Coffman, 27, and his wife, Doris, 23, of near Athens, were killed in an auto crash a mile south of Chillicothe.

A head-on auto collision at Hamilton killed Clinton Allen, 16. Two Negroes were shot to death in a Columbus confectionery in what police said was murder and suicide. They were Lawrence Gore, 30, and Mrs. Evelyn Rhyne, 27.

Harry Napierala, 26, was fatally injured when he dove in a quarry pool at Toledo.

Sixteen-year-old Emma Surls of Sebring died in an auto collision. Richard R. DeChristopher, 18-year-old Toledo messenger, was injured fatally when he fell from the running board of an auto.

Roy Lee Boyce, 42, was fatally injured when struck by lightning during a storm at Hamilton.

Frank B. Johnson, 87, died in Toledo of auto crash injuries, and Albert Ruedy, 49, of near Toledo, succumbed to injuries received when he fell from a hay wagon.

Mrs. Jennie Doubrava, died when a heavy tractor-trailer truck side-swiped the automobile in which she was riding in Akron. Her death brought Summit county's holiday traffic toll to four.

Clarence Duffy, 28, died in People's hospital, Akron, after a motorcycle accident killed John Slipota, 23, Cuyahoga Heights, the driver, and injured a third rider on the machine.

Frank Siml, 60-year-old Maple Heights resident, died this morning in Bedford hospital after he stepped into the path of an auto last night.

A shooting fray in Youngstown cost the life of Willis Gilmore, 48. Ralph Swindler, 17, died in Warren when he received a severe shock from handling an electric extension cord.

90 An Hour Too Fast

William Schmotzer, 20, of Broadview Heights was killed when his automobile, estimated by police as traveling nearly 90 miles an hour, failed to negotiate a curve.

Pearl Timmons, 16, of Kenton, was killed when the truck in which he was riding went out of control nine miles west of Upper Sandusky on the Lincoln highway.

GERMANS GAIN ON SOVIET SOIL, LOSE IN AFRICA

mand admitted that the enemy had driven a wedge into the Soviet lines in the Belgorod sector.

Earlier reports had painted a picture of an all-out German drive in an effort to smash through Russian defenses regardless of cost before the United Nations can come to the Soviets' aid by opening a second front against the forces of Adolf Hitler in Europe.

German news agency DNB broadcast a claim that Nazi troops have crossed the Don river at several points and formed a bridgehead.

The railway mentioned is an important lateral communication linking the armies of Marshal Semyon Timoshenko with those of General Grigori Zhukov around Moscow.

Nazi Field Marshal Fedor Von Bock was said to be hurling fresh reserves into the battle around Kursk as fast as his front line units were cut down in their furious assaults on the Russian positions.

The Soviet high command, however, made no admission of a Nazi penetration beyond acknowledging the break in the neighborhood of Belgorod and minor gains in other sectors.

Allies Hit Rommel Hard
Meantime, the desert legions of Nazi Field Marshal Erwin Rommel apparently were taking terrific punishment both from land and air forces of the British.

As Gen. Sir Claude Auchinleck's Eighth Imperial Army launched new assaults against the enemy, flyers of the RAF and South African air force hammered axis troop concentrations and struck repeatedly at Rommel's communication lines.

The Nazi "desert fox" had hastily reorganized his German and Italian forces to send new attacks against the British defense lines, but these were repulsed and the British then seized the initiative to oust the enemy from a stronghold.

Meantime, in the southwest Pacific General Douglas MacArthur's American and Australian airmen ranged wide over the waters to strike again at Japanese-held bases north of Australia. Attacks from the air hit Lae and Salamaua on New Guinea, Atamboua on Timor and Tulagi and Haleta in the Solomon islands.

The Japanese sent two waves of bombers against the Allied base of Port Moresby in southeast New Guinea but United Nations interceptors rose to greet them and shot down at least six enemy planes.

NEW CONTINGENT ARRIVES IN SEATTLE FROM NORTH

SEATTLE, July 6—Arrival in Seattle of another contingent of soldiers and civilians from the bombed Dutch settlement was revealed today by Army authorities.

Many of the soldiers were in the "walking wounded" classification.

Most of them were silent on their experiences during the Japanese raid on the Unalaska port.

$38,913.52 ROAD WORK APPROVED IN COUNTY AREA

County commissioners Monday approved the bid of T. D. Van Camp and Sons, Columbus, for surface-treating 49.33 miles of roads. Van Camp was the only bidder on the estimated $38,913.52 job and will receive $38,913.52 for his work under terms of the contract.

All roads affected by the measure will be black-topped with work expected to start sometime next week.

Resurfacing will be done on the Circleville-Winchester road, Circleville-Westfall road, Judas road, Circleville-Lockbourne road, Circleville-Groveport road, Circleville-Lockbourne-Cromley road, Ashville-St. Paul road, Dawson-Yanketown road, Circleville-Groveport creek road, Westfall-Kinderhook road, Williamsport - Chillicothe road, Sisk-Westfall road, Goodman-Teegardin road and the Circleville-Stoutsville road.

Various mileages are stipulated for each road with the worst sections on all roads included in the plans. The work will all be done by the private contractor and should last for several months together with township repaving projects that are being completed by the firm now.

TIRE BURNER ARRESTED

SAN FRANCISCO, July 6—Because he allegedly burned four oil tires, Emerson R. White, 30, was scheduled to appear before U. S. Commissioner Francis St. J. Fox today. Believed to be the first such action of its kind in the nation's history, White was arrested on the advice of John Bosche, attorney for the Federal Office of Price Administration in San Francisco. White was observed burning the tires by Police Inspector Joseph Andres. He was using the old tires as fuel to melt copper out of old auto starters and generators in a San Francisco junkyard.

Here's what he's doing...

And here's what you can do to help him!

When this basic training's over and he's sent to fight the hard-hitting Nazis and Japs, you want him to have the finest fighting equipment a man ever had—and plenty of it.

You—yes, you—can help him get it... by putting every dime and dollar you can into War Savings Bonds—at least 10 percent of your pay every pay day!

So take a look around. You could save more, couldn't you—for him—if you took the bus to work or shop instead of the car?—if you didn't go for a drive on Sundays?—if you didn't buy that "extra something"?—if you cut some useless spending here and some more there. Sure you could.

And just think! Those extra dimes and dollars put into War Savings Bonds might end the war sooner, bring him home safe and sound a day, a week, a month sooner than if you didn't save those dimes and dollars.

When you think of it that way, it makes you want to go out right now, doesn't it, and bring home the biggest Bond they've got at the bank or at the Post Office? Well, why not? There's nothing you could do that would help your boy more!

BIRTH CERTIFICATES

MANY people are learning that they need birth certificates, and that these are hard to get. Heretofore they knew they had been born, and supposed that this was evident to others. When the call came for actual proof of age, such as is required in many war industries, the average man found that he had no certificate and would have a tough job getting one.

Procedures vary in different states. All, however, so far as can be discovered, are highly difficult. One publisher has found it worth while to issue a book on these methods, giving the rules for each state.

They may also be expensive. In Ohio, while the usual fee in some counties, if the applicant can present adequate oral or written evidence of fact of birth in this county, is only $3.00, without such evidence that cost may run up to $6.50. In exceptional cases and in some other counties, the sum may be much higher.

The applicant may suspect that his interests were not considered in setting the fees, and in some places he would probably be quite right. The time and trouble involved, also, are often far too great.

Still, it ought to be worth $6.50 — or even twice that — to be able to prove citizenship in this fair land, especially at a time like this. The main thing that is needed is better organization so that certificates may be quickly, accurately and inexpensively given out to people who are entitled to them, while preserving a check to be sure the wrong persons do not get them at all.

PRIBILOF ISLANDS

THE inhabitants of the Pribilofs, more than five hundred of them, have been evacuated to Admiralty Island and Killisnoos in the Alexander Archipelago. Both points are in southern Alaska, at a presumably safe distance from the Aleutian spots in western Alaska where the Japs have landed.

These Pribilofs are often called the "fur-seal islands" because to their rookeries the seals migrate annually by thousands.

The Japs always did like to get more seals than they were entitled to by international agreement. It is hoped that the evacuees are giving way to American occupation and not to Japanese.

It may be all right to say the British can lose all the early battles and, by winning the last one, still win the war. But it does seem to take an awful lot of lost battles to get set for that last winning one.

WORLD AT A GLANCE

—By— Charles P. Stewart

MOSCOW reports that Il Duce is trying to frame up a European Latin federation independently of the Nazi-Japanese alliance are regarded with interest in the United Nations' diplomatic circles in Washington.

Doubts are expressed, however, that Russia's correct in assuming that Benito's rumored Latin activity is inspired by apprehension that the Nazi and Jap Axis pact is in imminent danger of defeat and that he is desperately anxious to get Italy uncoupled from them before it happens.

The surmise is, rather, that he's afraid Hitler (the Japs don't matter so much) will win, and that, having done so, his next move will be to absorb the Fascist peninsula into the Reich, with an immediate call tied onto Benito's ducship, of course.

The account the Soviet news agency, Tass, received from Geneva, is to the effect that Benito's aim is to compact Italy, France, Spain and Portugal into a bloc that can be relied on to stick together, whatever ensues.

Maybe one of the possibilities he envisions is triumph by the democracies. Still, the United Nations probably will feel no intensity of bitterness against Europe's Latins.

Probably they'll feel like marooning Benito, personally, on a desert island or some such place, but they'll be disposed to be kindly toward the rank-and-file of the Italians, who, it is recognized, never did have any heart in getting into the mess.

Franco Is Weak
The "Free French" will be regarded with oodles of sympathy. Spain's dictator, Caudillo Franco, is a pro-Hitler totalitarian—a Falangist, locally called. Franco, though, only got on top south of the Pyrenees after a desperate civil war with the rest of Spain, and with Nazi help back of him. The Spanish generally can't be blamed for him. And Portugal's chronically pretty democratic.

No, if the European Latins line up together, it should be on fairly democratic lines predominantly speaking. It won't be very pleasant to have Benito Mussolini amalgamate them, but it'll be funny, at that. And, of course, they won't bother with Benito long.

At Latin Americans — no chance! Benito knows he cannot possibly catch THEM.

The way Moscow relays the yarn, Benito's taken up his case with Foreign Minister Serrano Suner of Spain.

Caudillo Franco, as previously remarked, is a Falangist, a Nazi, a Fascist or what will you? — a totalitarian, a dictator; everything that's democratically all wrong Serrano Suner's his son-in-law.

Serrano—you say it with the accent on the second syllable—Ser-RAN-no. Then you come to Suner. That "n" has what's known as a little "hlide" over it—a little accent mark that gives it a liquid sound. It gives the "n" a slight skewish that spells "Soon-yare"—last syllable accented. You can't spell it in English, for we haven't the type.

A Divided France
France, as per Moscow's information, is to be divided up into a small group of independent states, with Spain to be of no consequence and wee Portugal of still less.

And who's to run the aggregation? Why, Germany proposes to run it, of course!

But—Benito Mussolini's theory is that he can do it—if he can discount Germany.

There's a certain amount of reasoning to the purport that it may be to our advantage in boosting for this Latin program against the Nazis.

It would be queer if Benito's philosophy should turn out to be the democracies' advantage. The cuss might succeed in weaning away democratic sentiment from the totalitarians.

The Nazis are suspicious of him already.

Is it possible that Benito is a traitor to Totalitarianism?

He's a different kind of a character than Adolf and his countrymen are different from Adolf's.

You have to differentiate between them.

GERMANS PUT ON BROADCAST

WASHINGTON—There were some very peculiar things about the way Gen. Rommel caught the British napping in Libya — things which probably won't be explained for a long time.

One of these was a mysterious short wave broadcast which came out of Germany in English, supposedly from an anti-Hitler underground station, congratulating the British on Rommel's defeat in an early stage of the campaign.

It is believed now that this broadcast was part of the trap to lull the British into complacency.

It will be recalled that when the Nazis first advanced, they met stiff British resistance and turned back. This was hailed as a British victory. And at exactly this moment, the strange voice out of Germany, recorded by U. S. listening posts, told how Rommel had started this drive without the approval of Hitler because the African commander was jealous of the publicity given the Russian front.

The strange German voice, gloating over Rommel's defeat, told how his aides had tried to dissuade him from the attack, and how he had finally obtained a promise that the Italian fleet would attack Alexandria simultaneously.

"But," gloated the German broadcaster in English, "the sailors of the Italian fleet are now sitting in the coffee houses and brothels of Tripoli."

The broadcast, it is believed, was one of several means used to lull the British. At any rate, when Rommel suddenly retreated, the British did not follow him until they had sent back to headquarters near Cairo for instructions. These orders did not come for four days.

So by the time they finally decided to follow Rommel, he had slipped far to the north, surprised a force of 7,000 New Zealanders near Tobruk, annihilated them, and then advanced almost behind the main force of the British which had started out to pursue him. The British were taken by surprise, and the ensuing battle turned the tide.

SCRAP IRON TO JAPAN

Now that Donald Nelson is even appealing for old war monuments, it is interesting to recall the State Department's conversations regarding scrap iron for Japan.

As early as August, 1940, Secretaries Stimson, Ickes, Knox and Morgenthau persuaded the President to sign an embargo against further shipments of scrap iron to Japan. But when Secretary Hull saw the embargo he held it up, persuaded the President to modify it so that it applied only to No. 1 grade of scrap.

On another occasion, before Pearl Harbor, Vice President Wallace sat in on conferences with the State Department and urged an immediate embargo on scrap iron to Japan.

"We're going to wake up and find ourselves caught short," argued Wallace, "with the scrap iron being fired back at us in the form of bombs."

Secretary Hull's representative smiled condescendingly.

"Let's be patient," he said, "we may (Continued on Page Eight)

Risks From Slight Injuries Which May Have Grave Results

By LOGAN CLENDENING, M. D.

TRAUMA is defined in the dictionary as "an injury or wound." Microtrauma is therefore a slight injury or a microscopic injury. It is surprising how many patients refer the beginning of their illness to an accident or an injury of some kind.

Dr. Clendening will answer questions of general interest only, and then only through his column.

kind. This connection can seldom be substantiated but the possibility of repeated minute traumas as a cause of illness is a very suggestive one. It has been discussed in detail by Dr. Ernest T. Duschak of New York.

Prolonged weight-bearing has an influence on compression of the cartilages of the joints of the spine and of the legs. A study of the pressure within the knee joint with the subject standing and with heavier and heavier weights added around the shoulders shows that the increase in weight-bearing decreases the circulation of tissue fluid in the joints until finally it stops completely.

Possible Results
Normally this goes on with everybody to a certain extent, but the stoppage of the circulation of tissue fluid in most of us is temporary, with no ensuing disorder of tissue nutrition. The compression and relaxation of the cartilaginous disks between the spinal vertebrae that occurs in breathing and bodily motion also normally results in no disorder. But with any decrease in perfect nutritional health of these structures, any slight increase in trauma may result in the beginning of arthritis or neuritis.

We discussed in an article a week or two ago the commonest cause of sciatica, which is a protrusion of the center of one of the cartilaginous disks between the vertebrae. This protrusion occurs as a result of trauma, but the trauma is usually so slight that the patient doesn't remember when it occurred. It may indeed be one of these conditions in which repeated microscopic traumatism causes the condition.

Program of Prevention
As time goes on, old age usually brings an increase of weight to the body and also a decrease of nutrition to the tissues, particularly to the joints, and it is not surprising that at this time the chronic symptoms of arthritis begin to be seen.

According to Dr. Duschak, soldiers, factory workers, dentists, surgeons, policemen, salesmen, cooks and waiters are particularly liable to microtrauma. Prevention depends upon shortening and interrupting the continuous weight-bearing by intercalated motions, the use of exercise, massage, vibration, heat and often the correction of such deformities as pronated feet, knock knees, bowlegs, etc.

These things, of course, are easier to say than to do but the conception is a reasonable one and those whose occupations expose them to microtraumatism may well engage on a program of prevention.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS
R. V. H.:—Will you please tell me whether grapefruit contains quinine?

Answer: No. The bitterness is due to certain of the organic acids that are present in nearly all fruits.

EDITOR'S NOTE: Dr. Clendening has seven pamphlets which can be obtained by readers. Each pamphlet sells for 10 cents. Looking Back in Pickaway County

FIVE YEARS AGO
Mr. and Mrs. William Allen and Mrs. Gregg Clelland of Middleborough, Ky., spent the week end with Dr. and Mrs. Gay L. Hitler, West Mound street.

The quaint lodge of Gold Cliff park made a pleasant setting for the first reunion, July 3, of the class of 1932 of Circleville high school. Thirty members of the class and 13 guests were present.

Felix R. Caldwell, 58, prominent farm manager and retired attorney, died of a heart attack at his home on South Court street.

10 YEARS AGO
Philip Moore, 10, son of Mrs. Howard B. Moore of South Court street, was painfully burned about the face when gun powder with which he was playing suddenly exploded.

Mr. and Mrs. John C. Goeller Sr. and children, Martha and William, of East Mound street returned after a trip through Kansas, New Mexico, Colorado and Texas. Elbert Goeller of Wichita, Kans., returned with them for a visit.

James Reichelderfer left for a trip to Baltimore, Md., Washington, D. C., and Philadelphia, Pa. He planned to visit his daughter, Ruth Reichelderfer, who was engaged in playground work in New York City before returning home.

Circleville Boy Scouts were spending a week camping on the J. W. Meyers farm, near Williamsport. William Burgett was camp master.

FLOWER WROG GARDEN
LIVINGSTON MANOR, N. Y. —"O, Garden, where is thy Victory?" moaned Pud Rose, a plowman here when he realized what had happened. He was engaged by H. C. Batte, local editor, to plow up one acre Victory Garden. Soon afterward, Axel Hansen, postoffice employee, dropped in to thank Batte for his help on the Hansen garden nearby. The mystified editor investigated and learned that Pud was not watching the editorial finger very closely when it was pointing out the Batte tract, so Hansen's plowing job is strictly on the house—Rose's.

We've noted no poet has ever written about being "knee-deep in July." Two many skeeters and chiggers.

This is the time of year when the victory gardener, looking again at the pictures in the catalogs, begins to wonder if they sent him the right kind of seed.

CHAPTER NINETEEN

"WHEN DID YOU meet this New York artist?" asked Miss Martha. "Last night," said Dian. "I was out for a while, and ran into Claire and him. His name's William Rollins."

"Miss Martha shrugged. "I should think having him in town while Paul's here would sort of complicate matters."

Dian laughed. "It does," she said. She pushed back her chair. "I'll run up and do my room, and then get started."

"I think," said Miss Martha, "that you're going out to the farm this morning just to annoy me."

"Why, Aunt Martha! What a thing to say!"

"It's certainly mighty queer, your rushing out there on the very morning you know Jerome's going to telephone."

"I told you," Dian said, "that the man who wants to see the paintings is here for only a short time. I can't put off showing them to him. He may know where I can tell some of the things, and we certainly need to sell something. Aunt Martha, you know that as well as I do."

"Of course I do. But who on earth would want to buy those things Pa painted?"

"Maybe they aren't so bad as you think them," Dian said. "Anyway, I want to get the reaction of someone who really knows." She hurried out into the hall. "Slip out and have a look at Betsy," she called back. "I not only got her innards to purring, but I lifted her chin and gave her a permanent."

"She certainly needed a little polishing up," said Miss Martha. "All right, I'll go look. I must say you do know how to take years off her."

Dian waited until she heard the closing of the back screen door, then she glanced at her watch. It wasn't 3 o'clock yet, but she wasn't going to let that deter her from what she was about to do. She picked up the telephone and asked for the number of the Ardendale Inn.

"May I speak with Mr. William Rollins?" she asked when the clerk at the Inn answered. "This is Miss Dian Weston calling."

"Just a moment, Miss Dian," the clerk said. "I think he's having breakfast. I'll page him."

In no time at all Bill Rollins was at the other end of the line.

"Hello, Dian!" he called cheerily. "I do hope you'll forgive me for calling you so early," Dian said, "but I find I've got to get out to the farm and back before noon, and wondered if you could leave earlier than we planned."

"Certainly I can," Bill said. "It's a marvelous morning—and I've a hankering for the country. Shall I come out now?"

"No," said Dian. "I'll pick you up at the Inn. In about half an hour. Will you be through breakfast by then?"

"Oh, yes. I'm just waiting for my eggs!" He laughed. "But I'd even forego them—for a ride."

Two receivers clicked back into the hooks. Dian raced up the steps to her room. She gave the bed a lick and a promise, and got out the blue linen. It wasn't exactly the thing to wear out to show a man a lot of dusty paintings stored in a farmhouse attic, but what of it? She wanted to look her best, didn't she? Of course she did! And while she prepared to do up, Bill Rollins saluted and peeped her eggs.

"Mind if I join you?" a masculine voice said at her elbow.

He looked up to see Paul Peters. "Why, hello there, Paul!" he greeted. "Join me by all means. How did you sleep?"

"Not very well," said Paul. He sat down, looking forlorn. "Kept dreaming that you and I were fighting duels—trying to outdo each other in feats of strength—while Claire stood at one side and watched us."

Bill chuckled. "Oh, well, it's morning now," he said, "and everything will be brighter. Have you telephoned Claire yet?"

"No, she's probably still sleeping," said Paul. Then, suspiciously, "Have you telephoned her?"

"No."

"Are you going to?"

Bill shook his head. "I'm all set for the day."

"How do you mean?"

"Dian Weston's coming by for me," said Bill. "We're driving out to her farm. I'm going to have a look at some paintings."

Paul looked relieved. The forlornness left his face. He perked up and ordered some breakfast.

"Swell girl, Dian!" he said.

"Yes, I know," said Bill. "You don't have to sell me the idea. He drained his cup. "I hope you find Claire in a receptive mood and get matters all straightened out."

"Thanks!" said Paul. "I hope so, too. Don't think for a moment I'm not going to try. I'll succeed if it takes every minute of my week in Ardendale."

"That's the spirit!" said Bill. "And now if you'll excuse me, I'll go stand in the sunshine and have a smoke while I wait for Dian."

Paul waited until Bill had risen from his chair, and then he said, "Claire's still got a yen for you, you know. Suppose she finally decides that you're the man for her. What then?"

"Let's not cross that bridge until we get to it," said Bill evasively. "So long! See you later!"

But Paul Peters was wrong about Claire's sleeping late. Like Dian, Claire also had awakened early. She had had plans.

She was now facing her mother in the breakfast nook of the rambling old Lester home. She sipped a glass of orange juice and watched the way the brilliant morning sun-shine played over the breakfast silver and china.

"What time did you get in last night?" her mother asked, breaking off a piece of Melba toast.

"It was this morning, darling," Claire said. Around 2 a. m.

"What on earth kept you out that late?"

"I was eloping."

"What!" Mrs. Lester choked on the piece of Melba toast, and reached for a glass of water.

"Take it easy, darling," Claire laughed. "The elopement didn't come off. The storm kept us from getting to the justice of the peace, and so here's your darling daughter—still unmarried."

"Claire, stop trying to be funny, and tell me everything that happened," Mrs. Lester got rid of the toast and leaned back in her chair, staring at her daughter. "Were you eloping with that artist from New York?"

"No, mother. The man was Paul Peters."

"Well, of all things!"

"But the man from New York was partly to blame for the failure of the elopement."

"How?"

"I mean if he hadn't been along—the elopement might have been completed when the storm was over."

"Do you mean he was with you also?"

Claire leaned forward. "Listen, Mother—this is the way it happened. As briefly as she could, Claire told of the happenings of the night before, while her mother listened, eyes wide, shaking her head in wonder now and then. And that," Claire climaxed, "is the whole story in a nutshell, so to speak."

"Well!" Mrs. Lester gasped. "I never in all my life heard of such goings-on!"

"Don't tell me you're shocked, darling!"

"No, of course not. But the whole thing sounds like something you might have read in a book."

"It does at that—that's why it's so exciting."

Doris Peters Bride Of Corporal W. B. McKinnon

Ceremony Read In Parents' Home Saturday

Wearing a bridal gown of ivory satin, Miss Doris Peters exchanged nuptial vows with Corporal William B. McKinnon at 8:30 p. m. Saturday before an improvised altar in the living room of the home of her parents, Mr. and Mrs. R. G. Peters, of 621 North Court street. The impressive single ring ceremony of the Methodist church was read by the Rev. Neil H. Peterson.

Ferns banked the mantle before which the service was read, tall baskets of white gladioli and seven-branch candelabra with white candles guarding either side of the approach.

Miss Reba Lee played "I Love You Truly" preceding the Lohengrin "Wedding March."

The bride's lovely floor-length gown was fashioned with a tight bodice finished with a peplum and had epaulets of fringe. A fingertip veil of illusion tulle fell from a tiara of orange blossoms. She carried a bouquet of white roses and swansonia. A strand of pearls, a gift from the bridegroom, added charm to the sweetheart neckline of the gown.

The bride and bridegroom were unattended.

A reception followed the wedding ceremony. The guests in addition to the immediate families of the bride and bridegroom were Mrs. J. E. McKinnon of Mariemont and Miss Audrey Dickhart of Piqua.

The couple will live at 815 North High street, Greystone apartments, Columbus, after a brief wedding trip. For traveling, the new Mrs. McKinnon wore a smart frock of white shadow sheer and black crepe with black accessories.

The bride is a graduate of Circleville high school and of White Cross hospital school of nursing. She also attended the University of Colorado, Boulder, Col., and is a member of the Alpha Upsilon chapter of the Delta Kappa Gamma society. For the last few years, the former Miss Peters has held the position of school nurse at Piqua.

Corporal McKinnon is the son of Mr. and Mrs. W. S. McKinnon. He is a graduate of Belle Center high school, Ohio State university and of the Air Corps technical school, Chanute Field, Rantoul, Ill., and is an instructor in the Army Air Corps at Ohio State university, Columbus. He is a member of the university chapter of Phi Sigma Kappa fraternity.

Svelte Mermaid

Left, sparkling white pique trimmed with red and navy rickrack in a ballet skirt and separate bra; below, black rayon jersey with lilacs appliqued on bosom and skirt.

MAYBE it won't be easy to travel to the seaside this summer; on the other hand, if you live by it, or near a good lake, your main recreation will be swimming. Some figures, let us face it, aren't naturally mermaid ideals. But if a woman with a difficult figure will take as much care in selection of bathing clothes as she does for the rest of her clothes, Nature can be camouflaged attractively.

Big Crowd Participates In Country Club Event

Marked by contests for men and for children and by a splendid display of fireworks, the annual Fourth of July celebration of Pickaway Country club more than upheld the record of the club for outstanding entertainment. Because of the severe summer storm in the late afternoon, many of the groups enjoyed the dinner hour on the large porch of the club where tables were available. A spirit of holiday geniality marked the crowd of 175 at the affair.

Tom Gilliland, Charles Gilmore and Dr. Robert Hedges each won golf balls for the scores in a putting contest. Harry Heffner won the blind bogey and Don Henry captured the trophy in the flag tournament.

Seventeen events were planned for the children and the races under various handicaps were heartily enjoyed by the spectators as well as the children. Prizes in all contests were Defense Stamps.

Bobby Phillips and Donald Hill won first and second in the chicken race for boys and Beverly Huston and Nancy Eshelman were victors in a similar event for the girls. Tommy Eveland and Don Hill, and Bobby Phillips and Gene Geib, comprised the winning teams in the leap frog race for boys. Martha Sue Cayce and Beverly Huston, and Nancy Eshelman and Joanne Hill, carried off honors as teams in the three-legged race for girls. George Foresman and Charles T. Gilmore came in first and second in the race for men.

Gene Geib and Bobby Phillips, and Tommy Eveland and Don Hill, were winning combinations in the three-legged race for boys. The cannon race for both boys and girls found Donald Woodward and Don Hill, and Jackie Mary Smith and Monna Lee Jeffreys, at the head of the contestants. Martha Sue Cayce and Jackie Mary Smith hopped to victory in the next event. Bobby Phillips and Gene Geib, and Don Hill and Tommy Eveland, as teams came in at the head of the boys in the wheelbarrow race.

Winners in the girls' sack race were Sally Ann Hellweg and Patsy Huston; in a similar race for boys, Danny Musser and Johnny Eshelman won the prizes. Martha Sue Cayce and Patsy Huston came in first in the 50-yard dash for girls. In the dog race for boys, prizes were won by Donald Woodward and Bobby Phillips with Patsy Huston and

SLOANE PLAYS

Are You a Missing Heir's Everett Sloane, one of the top-flight network radio actors, is in great demand these days both as a Nazi villain and entertainer for American armed forces. He has played Hitler (on March of Time), Himmler (on CBS) "Twenty-Second Letter" and Heydrich the Hangman, who was recently executed by Czech patriots. To atone for the Hitler stint, Sloane ran right out and saw his kid brother off to join the Army Air Corps. After impersonating Himmler, Sloane played an outdoor noon-hour show for New York City defense workers, and right after playing Heydrich, Sloane hurried off to the Stage Door Canteen to wait on tables for hungry United Nations soldiers and sailors.

Ashville's Holiday Fete One Of Finest In Years

ASHVILLE

About Ashville Fourth of July. The day dawned fair and the crowd gathered early, intent on having a day of festivities and enjoyment.

The first event was the parade, a feature we are proud of, which started from the park at 10:30 a. m., heading south to Main street in the following order:

Motorcycle Escort.
Ashville Mayor, Village officers and citizens.
Fraternal Club Lady Orioles, Neet 178, drum and bugle corps, Columbus.
Officers American Legion, Circleville.
Walnut high school band.
Fire department.
Float "God Bless America."
Decorated autos.
Cooper oil trucks.
Ashville and Lockbourne E. L. Sunday school float.
Victory float carrying several youngsters.

Gahanna band.
Ashville Service Men's club.
Red Cross Nurse class.
Walnut high school band directed by the former Miss Chesters Dountz, one time Ashville resident.

Decorated bicycle and tricycle squad.
Ashville high school band led by Majorette Irma Ruth Bowers and Barbara Campbell.

Children with pets.
Mounted horsemen.
Arriving at park parade disbanded.

The Ashville band, Fred Brobst directing, played the "Star Spangled Banner" and other patriotic selections, assisted by Oriole drum and bugle corps, W.H.S. and Gahanna bands. The local Boy Scouts raised Old Glory to the top of the flag pole as the audience engaged in a silent prayer for victory in the cause we love so dearly—American independence.

The day was ideal—not too hot—and the threatened shower in the afternoon failed to materialize. The crowd was large, not a record-breaking one, but a good time was had by all.

Dance lovers enjoyed the entire evening.

As the hour of midnight drew near the Merry Makers returned to their homes well satisfied with the days entertainment.

Maintaining our unbroken record of no accidents, those who had a part in making the celebration the success it was, can well feel proud of their achievement.

Our citizens offered real hospitality—the kind that warms the cockles of the heart.

Our neighboring city of Circleville was well represented. Howard Hall Post American Legion color guard, Ed C. Ebert, chief of the Aid for the Aged in Pickaway county, in charge, was assigned position at head of the parade. Other organization representing war activities were Navy Recruiting and Coast Guard service.

Parade prizes:
Best decorated bicycle: first prize, William Hinkle, $10; second, Bryan Grant, $5; third, Carolyn Fudge, $2.50; fourth, Doran Topolowsky, $1; fifth, Dick Fudge, 75 cents; sixth, Peggy Essick, 50 cents.

Best decorated tricycle: first, Beverly Kay Morrison, $2.50; second, Esther Hedges, $2; third, Robert Cline, $1.50; fourth, Larry Campbell, $1.

Best decorated baby carriage: first, Donnie Rathburn, $5; second, Marilyn Bowers, $2.50; third, Linda Silbaugh, $1.

Pet show: first, Gay Mallory, $2; second, May K. Rife, $1.
Comic entries: first prize, Anna Martin, $3; second, Woodford Ward, $2.

The two floats entered by the Lockbourne and Ashville Sunday schools were each awarded $10.

The parade judges were Rev. O. W. Smith, Rev. Dwight Woodworth, Supt. C. A. Higley, Fred Barthelmas, Mrs. Roger Hedges, Mrs. W. A. Bowers, Mrs. Shirley Cooper, Mrs. Mildred Messick.

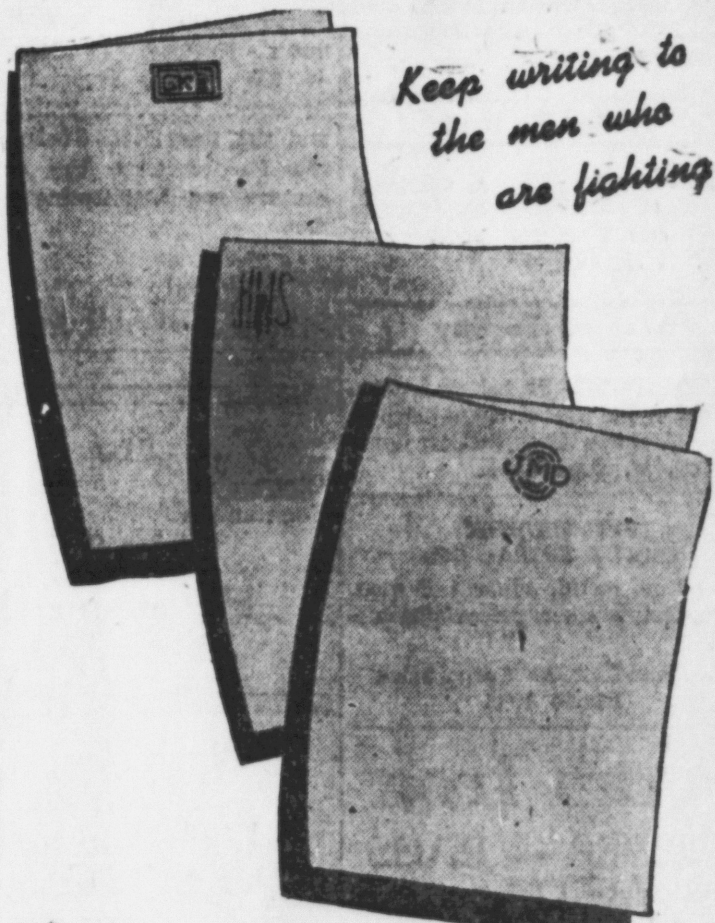

Dependability is one strong characteristic of this establishment.

Yanks Retain Margin; Dodger Lead Slashed

By International News Service
Major league baseball today had ceased all normal operations to turn its attention to the All-Star game at the Polo grounds this twilight and to the game between the winner and an all-service team in Cleveland Tuesday night.

When the last base knock and alibi had gone into the record books yesterday, the New York Yankees still clung to their four game lead in the American league. The Yanks did so by splitting a doubleheader, which were prevalent all over both leagues, with Philadelphia. The Athletics won the opening game, 5 to 4, despite 11 hits collected by the losers.

Given a tongue lashing between games by Manager Joe McCarthy who had returned to the team following a gallstone illness, the Yankees came back to win the nightcap, 4 to 2. Lefty Gomez received credit for the victory although he tired and left the game after allowing the A's six hits in seven innings.

Second place Boston failed to take advantage of the McCarthy-men, splitting with Washington. The Senators won the opener, 4 to 3, on George Case's single in the ninth.

Ray Starr hurled his 12th triumph to give the Cincinnati Reds a 5 to 2 win in the nightcap after they had dropped the opening game to Pittsburgh, 4 to 3. After the game Starr learned that he had been named to the All-Star team to replace his team mate, Paul Derringer, who was hit on the left knee by a line drive in the opening game.

It was a big day in Philadelphia. The lowly Phils actually swept both ends of a double feature with the New York Giants. The Phils took the opener, 3 to 2, behind some fancy hurling by Tom Hughes. Then St. Johnson and Ruge Melton combined to give the Phils a 5 to 3 victory in the nightcap.

These were two games the Phils absolutely will not protest.

KASEYS WILL BE HOSTS TO A. A. ALL-STAR GAME

COLUMBUS, July 6 — Kansas City Blues today appear certain to be the host team for the annual American Association all-star game as they start a new week of league campaigning with a five-game first place lead, and only eight games to be played before the decision is reached.

The Blues split with Milwaukee yesterday, winning the first 12-7 but dropping the finale 2-0 as Kusch held them to three hits in the abbreviated encounter. But the loss failed to harm them materially, since Columbus, whose 17 wins in the last 22 games has elevated the club to second place, also placed a twin bill.

Seventh-place Toledo snapped the Birds' five-game winning streak in the opener, 6-3, but the Flock came back in the nightcap, 8-4, to maintain their one-game advantage over third-place Milwaukee.

Minneapolis tumbled out of the first division when the last-place St. Paul Saints hung two on the Miller's button, winning 4-3 and 5-4 to take four of the five games in the series. Indianapolis meanwhile climbed into the upper flight with a twin win over sixth-place Louisville, 9-6 and 4-3.

VETERAN HURLER RELEASED
CHICAGO, July 6—Pete Appleton, relief pitcher for the Chicago White Sox, was given his unconditional release today, but probably will not have the opportunity to sign with another team as he expects to be called soon into the military service. He already has taken a physical examination. Appleton, now 37, has been in organized baseball 16 years during which he served with the Cincinnati Reds, Yankees, Indians, Red Sox and Senators.

LANDIS HINTS CHANGE CERTAIN IN TITLE SERIES

NEW YORK, July 6—Mark this down in your little red book—it's a sure pop the World Series is going to be different this Fall. How different, no one seems to know at the moment. But with the Major league club owners meeting today in annual mid-summer sessions—to be followed by a joint gathering—listen to what Judge Kenesaw M. Landis, baseball's high commissioner, has to say:

"I am quite sure that some change will be made in the World Series this year. But I am not sure what that change will be."

The change, of course, will benefit Army and Navy Relief and the United Service Organizations up to and including some $200,000. In cash money, naturally. The idea most prevalent seems to be to take the series on tour—with the services to get the extra dough.

Most promising plan right now seems to be an 8 of 15 game series—instead of the 4 of 7—with the first two games to be played in the two contending cities. After that, the entire show would go on a tour of minor league cities.

ALL-STAR JOUST STARTS AT 6:30 THIS EVENING

NEW YORK, July 6—Facts and figures on tonight's 10th annual Major league all-star game follow:

Place—Polo Grounds, New York.

50,000 TO SEE TWILIGHT GAME OF ALL-STARS

Polo Grounds Is Scene Of Classic; Passeau And Chandler To Start

By JACK MAHON

NEW YORK, July 6 — The greatest sports of the greatest nation in the world will reach across far flung oceans today to grasp the hands of their countrymen in a twilight service when the finest baseball players in America meet at the Polo grounds in the tenth annual All-Star classic.

In a flag-draped stadium filled with military officials and martial music, the best athletes of the National and American leagues will clash before an expected capacity crowd of 50,000 fans in a game that this year, more than ever before is really an all star attraction.

For today's game is being played not for the fans alone nor the players but for the boys who had to go away for awhile to do the most important job of their generation. Every cent of the first $100,000 collected today, and tomorrow evening's game between the New York winner and an all service all star team in Cleveland, will go to the ball and bat fund which provides baseball equipment for the boys in the country's colors.

Dodger Manager Leo (The Lip) Durocher, celebrating his first year as pilot of the National stars released a tentative starting lineup which contained four members of his champion Bums, two Giants and assorted members of the Cards and Braves. It contained Brown, Vaughan, Reiser, Mize, Ott, Medwick, Miller and Mickey Owen. Because Mort Cooper who was the consensus of the dimmed out experts as starting pitcher, was clouted off the hill by the Cubs Saturday, it is believed Syngali Durocher will start Whit Wyatt or Claude Passeau. Either of them is expected to pitch the middle three innings of the fray while the final pitcher is highly problematical.

Uncle Joe McCarthy, whose heart will be broken if his American team fails to win the seventh triumph in this famous series, had to juggle his line up a bit because his No. 1 backstop, Bill Dickey suffered a shoulder injury and will be unable to play. This is the second time Bill has been forced out of the all star business because of injuries, having missed the '35 game for the same reason.

Tebbets Gets Call
Marse Joe said Birdie Tebbets, the one man photograph, will be behind the plate in Bill's place with Hal Wagner of A's slated to be the relief backstop.

Barring other changes, Amerks will take the field with Boudreau at short, Henrich or Spence in right field, Williams, left field, DiMaggio in center, Gordon at second base and York on first. Keltner at third by Tebbets, and probably Spud Chandler of the Yankees on the hill.

McCarthy was expected to pick his ace, Ernie Bonham, to open the battle but because of the recent crucial series with the Red Sox, had to use him and Red Ruffing Saturday. That means he will probably send Lefty Hal Newhouse of the Tigers in there for three innings and may gamble with Edgar Smith of the White Sox for the final three.

The Nationals are packed with left handed power hitters and marse Joe may try and pull the fuse with the only two lefties he has available.

LEADING HITTERS

National: Reiser, Brooklyn 361; Medwick, Brooklyn 344; Lombardi, Boston 315.

American: Williams, Boston 348; Gordon, New York 347; Doerr, Boston 346.

Trees Destroyed, Utility Wires Torn Loose In Storm Series

MORE THAN INCH OF RAIN FALLS IN CIRCLEVILLE

Service Department Crews Called Out Twice To Clear Debris

FIRE ALARM NO. 16 OUT

Damage To Wheat Crop In County Feared By Farmers

Hundreds of trees in Circleville were damaged, many utility wires were torn loose and other damage was done Saturday evening and early Sunday by a series of wind storms and rain that at times reached cyclonic strength.

Most of the debris left by the gales had been cleared away Monday by members of the city service department working under direction of Clarence Helvering, and by others employed by property owners to remove destroyed trees.

Starting at 5:30 p. m. Saturday the storm struck hard here, then returned at 7 a. m. Sunday to again cause damage.

Firemen were called to East Mill street Saturday 15 minutes after the storm broke when wind broke off an electric wire which caused flames in a tree as it fell.

1.29 Inches Recorded

Service department men were called out Saturday evening for the first time to clear streets of trees and limbs and the Sunday downpour and gale caused them to return to work. Many streets of the city were flooded during the two storms. Rainfall during the two days totalled 1.29 inches.

The city's fire alarm system, especially in the north end, was out of order during most of the week end, but Acting Chief Robert Wolf reported Monday that only one box remains out of commission at this time, it being No. 16 at Court and York streets.

Several houses in the city were menaced by falling trees, although no great damage was reported, except in some instances where utility wires were broken. Window glasses in several residences were broken out. Several automobiles parked on the city's streets were struck by falling limbs of trees, but no great damage was done to the vehicles.

The Darbyville pike was blocked for a short time Sunday when two telephone poles fell across the road. These were quickly removed. Crews of electric and telephone companies were busy all day Sunday making repairs.

Despite the strength of the gale, little damage was reported outside of Circleville. Lightning killed three cows on the Pat Smallwood farm just west of Circleville.

Damage to wheat is feared by some farmers. The crop is very ripe and sprouting is possible unless the rains subside.

JOAN McDILL WINNER OF CICERO ESSAY TROPHY

Miss Joan McDill, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Russell McDill of Frankfort, was judged first prize winner in the Cicero essay contest sponsored by the Ohio Classical Conference, which is affiliated with the Ohio Education society. With the honor goes a $25 award to Miss McDill and a silver cup to Frankfort high school where she will be a member of the senior class the coming year.

The cup is a circulating trophy and will be held by the Ross county school for a year.

Miss McDill's essay concerned the home of Cicero and its composition involved considerable research.

BOY WHO FELL OUT OF TREE HURT SERIOUSLY

Cecil Hatfield Jr., 11, New Holland route 1, remained in fair condition at Berger hospital Monday. Young Hatfield was admitted Friday for emergency treatment after falling from a tree at his home. It is reported that the boy was playing in the tree when he fell from his elevation and received the injuries.

He was brought to Berger hospital in a New Holland ambulance and is receiving treatment for a compound right leg fracture, bruises and cuts on the face. X-rays are being taken to determine if his left wrist is broken.

SCRAP MASTERMINDS

War chiefs are not saying so publicly, but they ardently hope Donald Nelson meant what he said when he announced an "intensified campaign to stimulate the flow of all vital scrap materials," for the scrap collection phase of his organization is one of the worst muddles of the war program.

Some war chiefs also think he must start his "intensified campaign" by scrapping the bungling heads of WPB's Bureau of Industrial Conservation, in charge of scrap collection.

Under Director Lessing Rosenwald and Deputy Director Paul C. Cabot, this bureau has been one of the biggest busts of WPB, and they have a confidential letter in their files officially telling them so.

The letter is from Undersecretary of War Robert Patterson and Undersecretary of Navy James Forrestal, who bluntly told Rosenwald and Cabot that their agency has been very ineffectual.

This should have been nothing new to the two gentlemen involved, for last Winter more than 30 steel mills suspended work for lack of scrap iron. Even now, although all mills are operating, Rosenwald and Cabot are still putting around on plans to build up an ample reserve stockpile of scrap for next Winter.

TIN MESS

The mismanagement of scrap tin collection has been even worse, if that is possible.

Tin is one of the most acutely scarce metals in the U.S.A. Yet, except for some half-baked, faltering efforts, little has been done to collect the thousands of tons of tin cans easily obtained from the patriotic housewives of the whole country. These cans, incidentally, would also provide scrap iron.

At present the United States has five tin-salvage plants with a capacity of 225,000 tons. Others planned and under construction will raise this figure to around 600,000 tons in 1943. But meanwhile, due to the bungling of Rosenwald and Cabot, the plants already in existence aren't getting enough tin scrap to keep them running at full load.

That is the sort of masterminding that has botched the record of the Bureau of Industrial Conservation from its start.

HIGH-PRESSURE BOYS

Here is another gem of masterminding.

Spurred by a barrage of complaints, Rosenwald and Cabot finally decided they had to do something spectacular and do it fast. They hit on the idea of a nationwide government-financed advertising campaign to boom the faltering scrap collection programs.

Weeks were spent drawing up plans. After which, the advertising program was turned over to the firm of Hill & Knowlton. This is the same firm which the Senate Civil Liberties Investigating Committee criticized so severely for conducting an anti-labor campaign on behalf of union-fighting steel companies.

But that isn't all. WPB insiders say that Hill & Knowlton have called in to assist them James Selva, former National Manufacturers association publicity man, who recently departed from a $25-a-day Navy department job while under hot laborite fire. It was charged that Selva, while working for the Navy, secretly raised money from business men to finance a campaign against the President's war labor policies.

TWO YOUTHS INJURED IN ROSS COUNTY ACCIDENT

Three youths narrowly escaped serious injury early Saturday when the car in which they were riding overturned on route 23, north of Chillicothe.

Jack Funk, 20, South Court street, and Harold Smith, 21, Walnut street, were taken to Chillicothe hospital, where they were treated for injuries while the driver, Edwin Hill, 18, Circleville route 4, escaped without injury.

Hill reported going to sleep at the wheel near the junction with route 159 at 4 a. m. The car left the road and after turning over came to a stop in a fence. State highway patrolmen were called to the scene.

Funk was treated for lacerations of the right leg and forehead and Smith for a broken shoulder and minor lacerations. Both boys were reported in good condition and have been removed to their respective homes.

NEW HOLLAND MAN HURT AS RIFLE DISCHARGES

Frank Schreckengast, 44, of New Holland route 1, was rushed to Grant hospital, Columbus, Saturday in an ambulance after he was injured by a rifle shot that pierced his left lung.

The man is in fair condition according to hospital attendants. Schreckengast told hospital attaches that the .22 calibre rifle went off accidentally.

RED CROSS UNIT PARTICIPATES IN BIG INSTITUTE

Circleville Red Cross chapter will be well represented at the four-day state Wartime Institute for Chapter Workers, which began Monday at the Neil House in Columbus. Between seven and 10 delegates from the local group will attend various of the sessions according to Carl Leist, chairman.

The confab will close Thursday at noon.

This is the first wartime meeting for this locality since 1918 and sessions will cover the relationship of the Red Cross service to the war effort, disaster preparedness, services to the armed forces, first aid and nursing activities and plans for the combined war fund-rol call appeal which is to be launched early in 1943.

Program for the institute is as follows:

Monday: 9:30 a. m. definition of institute objectives, relationship of Red Cross to war effort; 1:30 p. m. volunteer special services; 7:30 p. m. foreign operations; 8:30 p. m. public information.

Tuesday: 9:10 a. m. nursing services; 10:30 Junior Red Cross; 1:30 p. m. service to the armed forces, military and naval welfare, home service; 7:30 p. m. home service conference.

Wednesday: 9:10 a. m. war fund and roll call; 10:30 disaster preparedness and civilian war aid; 2:00 p. m. first aid, water safety, accident prevention; 4:15 p. m.

motion pictures on water safety and first aid.

Thursday: 9:00 a. m. to 12:00 noon, general chapter operations. During the course of the event many of the state leaders in Red Cross activity will address the conference with plans outlined for a complete war program.

MRS. JOHN MCGINNIS TO WORK IN RATION OFFICE

Mrs. John McGinnis, East Franklin street, has been named the new clerk-typist in the county rationing office to replace Mrs. Frank Marion who resigned July 1. The official civil service papers came through Monday. Mrs. McGinnis will assume her new duties Thursday.

She will receive a salary of $1,260.

O. S. U. TO POST NAMES OF GRADS IN SERVICE

Ohio State university's alumni office wants the names and addresses of all Ohio State alumni and former students from Pickaway county now in the service.

In an appeal to local parents and friends to send in names of Ohio State men in service, Alumni Secretary John B. Fullen says that plans are under way to install on the campus a large bulletin board on which these names will be listed and others will be added from time to time.
